(AGI) - Turin, November 14 - One in two smokers can 'give up using traditional cigarette with a significant reduction in respiratory impairment due to use of the electronic cigarette driven. And 'the conclusion reached by the researchers from the Smoking, Alcohol and Drugs National Institute of Health' in collaboration with the Centre of the St. John Bosco Smoke ASL TO 2 of Turin. The study included 34 smokers, 18 men and 16 women, aged 'average age 40, who consumed

20 cigarettes a day for at least two decades. Participants were visited exhaustively and was measured carbon monoxide in breath as a marker of absorption of the products of combustion of the cigarette. In all 'was proposed the use of the electronic cigarette in place of the normal cigarette. The medical team gave the participants a complete kit with the electronic device, the battery charger to charge your device and a series of liquid containing nicotine, chosen by the smoker according to his preferences on flavorings. Health professionals also taught for smoking the correct use of the device, taught that " as it absorbs nicotine from the electronic cigarette "without incurring a withdrawal crisis or iperdosaggi. "Yeah 'after the first month of the study, 74 percent of the participants used the only electronic cigarette, a 18 percent smoking is the electronic cigarette than five cigarettes a normal and only 8 percent of the participants continued to smoke regular cigarettes "said Fabio Beatrice, Director, Center Smoke St. John Bosco in Turin. "Clearly smokers and smokers Mixed electronics had a value of carbon monoxide in exhaled significantly more 'low, reaching the so-called normal (0.3-0.5 percent) in the population do not smoke," he added.
